

Coffee in Poland

Coffee is a drink made from roasted and then ground or instantized coffee beans, usually served hot. Coffee comes from Ethiopia, in Africa.

A certain goat ate some coffee beans while grazing. The shepherd noticed that she was unable to sleep after that. He decided to taste it himself, but the grains were unpalatable. The shepherd threw them into the fire. Then he smelled a lovely fragrance. He took the seeds out of the fire and poured hot water over them.

Then coffee made its way to Persia and the Persians fell in love with it.

Initially, Christians treated coffee as satan's drink, but Pope Clement VIII denied these rumors.

The popularity of coffee grew when the coffee beans were presented to Louis XIV as a gift.

When the Turks lost at Vienna, they left 500 sacks of coffee and that's how it ended up in Poland.

Once upon a time, coffee was a luxury item. It was bought in grains and ground in mechanical mills.

This is a mill that my great great grandparents Klara and Józef got as a wedding gift.

Those times are gone. Gradually, new fancy coffee-making appliances appeared. There are many ways to brew it, and it is an art. Now we often buy ground coffee. You can also buy decaffeinated and instant coffee.

Thank you for your attention.
